

A SIMPLE LOOK AT THE APP

What Frendz Does

Every screen, every feature, explained in plain English.

BETTER VIBES. ZERO BULLSH*T.

Frendz is built to make meeting people feel easy — swipe through people nearby, get noticed, and start real conversations without the awkward part. This is the full walkthrough: every screen, every button, and why it's there.

Inside: Getting In · The Deck · Flares · Chat · Nearby · Admirers · Your Profile · Safety & Settings · The Little Touches

GETTING IN

First impressions matter, so getting into FrenDz is quick — but it's also careful about who's allowed in. Here's every step, in order.

The first thing you see

The app opens on a splash screen — the FrenDz name with a soft red glow animating behind it — before landing on the Welcome screen. It sets the tone before you've even signed up: dark, bold, a little electric.

Signing up

- Two ways in. Create an account with an email and password, or skip the form entirely with Continue with Google, Apple, or Twitter.
- No username overthinking. If you don't pick one, FrenDz automatically builds one from your email so you're never stuck on a blank field.
- Logging back in is just email and password, with a Forgot password link if you get locked out.

The age check

Before you can do anything else — before a profile, before browsing, before anything — FrenDz asks for your date of birth through a simple picker. It's not a checkbox you can breeze past. If you're under 18, the app stops you there. This keeps the whole community an adults-only space from the very first screen.

Agreeing to the ground rules

A one-tap screen asking you to accept the Community Guidelines. You can't build a profile until you've agreed — everyone on FrenDz has seen the same rules before they show up in someone else's Deck.

Building your profile — 3 quick steps

- Step 1 — You. Add a photo, write your bio, and pick a few interests that describe you.
- Step 2 — What you're into. Set your gender, who you're interested in meeting, and pick a favorite song — FrenDz searches Apple Music right there so people can preview it on your profile.
- Step 3 — Where and who. Set your location (this is what powers Nearby and your matches), plus your starting preferences for age range, distance, and who you want to see.

Three steps, no walls of text, and by the end you already have a real profile — not a half-finished placeholder.

THE DECK

This is home base — the full-screen stack of people you swipe through. It's built to feel fast and a little addictive, in a good way: one hand, one thumb, keep going.

Two ways to browse

- For You — a curated stack, picked for you based on your preferences and activity.
- Nearby — the same swipe experience, but sorted purely by distance, closest first.

A toggle at the top switches between the two instantly — no separate screen, no reload wait.

Swiping

- Drag a card left to pass — gone, no notification sent to them.
- Drag a card right, or tap the send arrow, to send a request.
- Tap a card (instead of dragging) to open that person's full photo set before you decide.

Sending a request the right way

Swiping right doesn't just fire off a blank request. A small composer slides up with one-tap quick-reply chips — things like “Hey!” or “Love your slides” — plus a box to write your own message. It removes the blank-page problem: you always have something easy to send, or you can write something better.

What each card shows you

- Their photo, name, and age.
- A music crush badge if you both like the same artist — an instant, honest conversation starter.
- How far away they are.
- Whether they're online or active right now.
- Their state and zodiac sign.
- Their @username.

Small touches that matter

- Refresh reloads the deck if you want a fresh batch of people.
- Undo instantly brings back the last card you passed on — no more “wait, go back” regret.
- Run out of people for now? A friendly “you've seen everyone for now” screen appears with a Show me more button instead of just leaving you stuck on a dead end.

FLARES

Quick, disappearing posts that sit right on top of your profile. If your profile is who you are, a Flare is what you're doing right now — and it gives people the perfect excuse to reach out.

Why it works

- You get noticed more. A fresh Flare puts your photo back at the top of everyone's screen with a glowing ring around it.
- Talking gets easier. People reply to what you posted instead of sending an awkward, generic “hey.”
- Zero pressure. Nothing you post sticks around — it's gone in a day, so there's no need to make it perfect.

Posting one — takes about 15 seconds

- Tap your own photo at the top of the app.
- Snap a photo or video, or grab one from your camera roll.
- Add a caption if you want — a thought, a question, a song lyric, anything.
- Hit Post.

You can also attach a quick prompt to make replying even easier for people — things like “Reply with a song,” “Ask me anything,” “Rate this,” or “Who's around tonight?”

How people see it

Anyone who taps the glowing ring around your photo gets pulled into a full-screen view — just your post, nothing else on the screen. They can tap through if you posted more than one, hold to pause, and swipe down to close it. There's always a reply box waiting at the bottom.

From reply to real conversation

When someone replies to your Flare, it shows up in your chats with a small preview of exactly what they were replying to — so you never get a message that feels random. If you're not connected yet, it lands as a request first, and you decide whether to open it.

The details

What	How it works
How long it lasts	24 hours, then it's gone for good
How many photos/clips	Up to 3 per Flare
Video length	Up to 15 seconds each

What	How it works
Who sees it first	People you're already talking to and people nearby
Can you delete early?	Yes, anytime, in one tap
Can you see who viewed it?	Yes — just for you, not shown publicly

CHAT

Once you're talking to someone, everything happens here — and it's built to feel like a real conversation, not a stiff messaging tool bolted onto a dating app.

Three simple lists

- Recent — your active conversations. Every row shows their photo, name, last message, how long ago it was sent, and an unread badge if you've got something new.
- Requests — people who want to talk to you, waiting for your yes.
- Sent — requests you've sent out that haven't been answered yet.

Tap any row and you're straight into the conversation — no extra loading screen in between.

Inside a conversation

- Text — type and hit send, or just tap Enter.
- Photos — tap the image icon, pick from your camera roll. Every photo gets automatically screened before it's ever sent, so what lands in the chat is safe.
- Voice messages — hold the mic button to record; it turns into a little playable waveform bubble you can tap to listen back.

Always know where you stand

The top of every chat shows whether the other person is online right now, or exactly how long ago they were last active ("2m," "1h," "3d") — so you're never left wondering if you've been left on read.

If something feels off

A three-dot menu sits in every chat with two one-tap options: Report, which opens a short safety form, or Block, which cuts the person off instantly. No confrontation, no explanation required, no delay.

NEARBY

A simple, searchable list of people close to you right now — for when you'd rather scroll and pick than swipe one at a time.

- See everyone's distance from you at a glance ("8mi", etc.), along with their name, age, and a verification badge if they're verified.
- Search by name or favorite artist to find someone specific in seconds.
- Hit Request right from the list to say hi instantly, with a friendly "Hey!" default message ready to go — no need to open their full profile first.
- If a search comes up empty, a clear message lets you know instead of leaving you staring at a blank screen.

Admirers

Everyone who's already shown interest in you, all in one place — so you always know who's paying attention.

- A grid of big photo cards, each showing their name, age, and a music-crush badge if you share an artist.
- Tap Send request right from their card to get the conversation going without extra steps.
- Tap the card itself to open their full profile and photos before deciding.
- New here? A friendly "no admirers yet" screen explains what the feature is and how it fills up over time.

YOUR PROFILE

Your profile is more than one photo and a bio — it's a set of “slides” you build yourself, like your own little story about you that anyone can flip through.

What's on your profile page

- Your photo, name, @username, age, state, zodiac sign, and a verification badge if you've verified.
- Your display name is editable right there — tap the pencil, type, tap the check to save.
- A Sparks counter shown right on your card.
- Three action buttons: Preview (see your profile exactly as others see it), Edit (jump into the slide editor), and Verify if you haven't yet.
- An Admirers preview strip showing a few people who are into you, with a “View all” link to see everyone.
- A Settings gear in the header for quick access to account and safety controls.

Building your slides

This is where your profile actually comes to life. Each slide is a full photo card you can customize from scratch:

- Tap anywhere on a slide to add text, then drag it wherever you want on the photo.
- Double-tap any text to edit it.
- A text panel lets you change the color, pick a font (a clean sans, a rounder one, a mono style, or a serif), and adjust the size with a slider.
- Search Apple Music and attach a song to the slide, artwork and all, so it plays for anyone who visits.
- Add a brand-new slide anytime by uploading a photo — it goes through the same safety screening as chat photos before it's live.
- Move between slides with simple Prev/Next controls and a “1 / N” counter so you always know where you are.
- Hit Save and you're back on your profile — if you back out before saving, your changes stay local and don't get published.

Viewing a full profile

Whether it's your own profile or someone else's, tapping into it opens a full-screen, swipeable photo carousel — page dots at the top show how many slides there are, and you can tap to jump between them. On someone else's profile, you'll also see their name, verification badge, online status, age, state, zodiac, location, and a music-crush badge if you share an artist — with a message box pinned at the bottom so you can reach out without leaving the screen.

SAFETY & SETTINGS

Everything about how you're seen, who can reach you, and how you're protected — all in one place, and none of it buried.

Account

- Update your email, phone number, or password whenever you need to.
- Quick links to every legal page.
- Log out in one tap.
- Delete your account entirely, if you ever decide to leave.

Visibility

- Go incognito so you can browse without showing up in other people's Decks.
- Control your distance and location-sharing preferences.
- Decide whether people can see when you've read their messages.

Discovery preferences

- Set your age-range sliders for who shows up in your Deck.
- Set your max distance.
- Choose who you're interested in seeing.

Notifications

A clean list of toggle switches, one per category — requests, messages, admirers, and more. Turn on what you care about, turn off the rest.

Blocked users

A simple list of everyone you've blocked, with an Unblock option if you ever change your mind.

The Safety Center

A dedicated space that helps you spot trouble before it starts, and gives you a clear, simple way to report it if it does.

- Easy-to-read cards covering common red flags — fake profiles, money scams, emotional manipulation tactics, and practical tips for meeting up safely in public.
- A status badge confirming your account is in good standing.
- A one-tap report form — pick a reason, add a note if you want, submit. It's the same simple form used everywhere in the app, whether you're reporting from a chat or here.

- Direct links to the full Privacy Policy, Terms, Community Guidelines, Safety & Reporting Policy, Age & Minor Safety Policy, and Cookie Notice, whenever you want to read the fine print.

THE LITTLE TOUCHES

The small things you might not notice right away, but that make Friendz feel like Friendz.

Built for your phone

Friendz is designed mobile-first, on purpose. Open it on a laptop or a bigger screen and it'll politely ask you to grab your phone instead, showing a QR code so you can jump straight there.

No app store needed

Friendz installs straight to your home screen like a native app — icon, full-screen launch, the works — without ever needing to go through an app store.

The look and feel

Deep black and charcoal backgrounds, the signature cool-red glow as the one accent color that shows up everywhere, rounded pill-shaped buttons, and clean, modern type throughout. It's designed to feel a little more premium and a little more alive than a typical app.

It feels alive

Smooth swipe physics on the Deck, slide transitions on your profile, and small motion feedback on cards, albums, and menus. Nothing feels stiff — every tap has a little response built in.

Online status

Real, live “online” or “last seen Xm/h ago” badges wherever you see someone's photo — on cards, in chat, on their profile — so you always know when someone's actually around.

Music crush

Whenever you and someone else both list the same favorite artist, a little heart badge appears — “Music crush: SZA” — an instant, honest conversation starter that requires zero effort from either of you.

Zodiac signs

Pulled automatically from your birthday during sign-up and shown everywhere with a fun little emoji — no need to type it in yourself.

Verification badges

A blue checkmark on verified accounts, shown consistently across cards, lists, headers, and chat — so wherever you're looking, you can tell in one glance who's real.

That's Friendz. Every screen built to make meeting people feel less like an app and more like actually meeting someone.